

ABSTRACT

The invention concerns an electronic and mechanical device incorporated in watches and wrist bands enabling double worldwide representation of solar calendar and phases of the moon. The first, pictured on a circular LCD display panel, displays all year round, the day and night evolution at standard time or winter time; the second, digitally displayed, only the standard sunset time. The mechanical part adapts the phases of the moon to the two hemispheres.